

Free Web Access To Land Records Is Now Available

Montgomery County Clerk/Recorder Sandy Leitheiser recently announced that a new free web access service is now available to find information regarding recorded land-related documents in Montgomery County as part of the services of the recording department of that office.

While office staff is always pleased to offer customer assistance by phone or in person, those interested may now look up land record information for documents recorded from 1991 to present by accessing this new free database at the Montgomery County website at <http://www.montgomeryco.com/countyclerk/recording/recordsearch.php>.

This free information is intended to provide basic recording information regarding documents, and will be especially helpful to both private citizens and businesses who wish to confirm that their documents sent by mail or by another party have been recorded in the Montgomery County recorder's office.

For those who may wish to have more in-depth web access, which includes viewing and printing images of land record documents, the Montgomery County clerk/recorder's office continues to participate in the website www.landrecords.net, which generates searches and prints for a small fee.

For those unable to access the internet or not desirous of the web access fee, Leitheiser continues to invite the public to visit their office during business hours of Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. and make use of the free public computer stations available to search land records information, and staff is available to assist them. Those with questions about the new free web access land records service may contact the Montgomery County clerk/recorder's office by phone at 217-532-9534.
